Short bio

Hi! I am Doniyor. As a teen I have tried different kind of jobs, including woodwork, professional music and video content creation and programming. The latter felt the best for me, so I have chosen it as my future profession. Currently, I am full time junior student at INHA University in Tashkent, where I am studying software engineering. Initially, I have started with C++ for desktop apps development, then I have moved to backend web development with Laravel. Finally, taking into the consideration mobile phones widespread I decided to become mobile software developer with Flutter framework and Dart programming language.

Personal statement

As a software developer, I think the way you implement your solutions inside your apps defines your professionalism. Also, it is crucial to use your imagination to test your soft properly by considering every use cases and crazy user inputs. As a candidate I always look for challenges, which potentially may teach me something new, important and exciting. My job is not only about profit, but also about expressing my critical and analytical thinking.
